St. Louis - Samara
Sister Cities Committee
121 S. Meramec, Suite 1111
St. Louis, MO 63104

Samara, formerly Kuybyshev, is the capital of its region in Russia. Because it sits on the banks of the Volga and Samara rivers, it is a major river port and rail center. Samara has established itself as a home for US, German, Swiss and French investments including Delphi Automotive, Pepsi, Coca-Cola, Nestle and Danone.

Samara was founded in 1586 as a Muscovite stronghold to defend the Volga trade route and Russia's eastern frontier. The USSR transferred its central government to Kuybyshev during World War II, which increased the city's population and city limits.

Samara is seeking to secure itself a promising future as a center for Western capital and attract more foreign funds to one of Russia's most pro-business regions. The wealthy Samara oblast wishes to leverage its locally mined gold to develop Samara's aeronautics, automotive and foodstuffs industries.

Sister City activities began in 1956 under President Eisenhower's People-To-People program. Today, the Sister City program links 1,200 U.S. cities with 1,900 partner cities worldwide.
